OHCE WEEK CELEBRATED WITH MANY ACTIVITIES

Volunteers of the Oklahoma County OHCE (Oklahoma Home and Community Education) organization celebrated OHCE Week May 7-13.

President Gayla Mosteller read the OHCE Week proclamation at the Board of County Commissioners meeting to kick off the week of activities. The week also included a trip to the First Americans Museum, the annual achievement awards luncheon, displays in local libraries, and volunteering with the 4-H Mother's Day Tea fundraiser. Two new OHCE groups were started this year, for a total of eight groups across Oklahoma County.

Ralph Ellison Library Program

During May, Taylor Conner, FCS Educator and Registered Dietitian, partnered with Ralph Ellison Library to teach "Intro to Air Fryers". The program took place on a Monday afternoon with nearly 20 people in attendance.

Taylor talked about how air fryers work and why they can be a healthier choice in comparison to deep fryers. She also shared how to choose an air fryer for those who are considering buying one and how to clean and store the units.

Afterwards, Taylor conducted a food demonstration with an air fryer tofu recipe. This provided an opportunity on how to use the unit as well as touch on protein food alternatives such as tofu.

Water Conservation Programs

In May 2023, Urban Agriculture Educator Joshua Campbell presented a series of educational programs including three Water Conservation in the Garden programs at the Downtown OKC, Southern Oaks, and Ralph Ellison libraries. In this workshop series he discussed how to plan for irrigation and other important considerations for efficient management of water for landscape and vegetable gardens.

In addition, he teamed up with the Oklahoma County Conservation District to teach a compost and soil health workshop at Will Rogers Gardens.

American Association of Agricultural Education Conference

In May 2023, Urban Agriculture & Natural Resources Educator, Joshua Campbell, traveled to Raleigh, North Carolina and North Carolina State University to attend the 2023 American Association of Agricultural Education Conference. During the conference, he presented on his work in urban Extension programming.

While there, he toured the North Carolina Department of Agriculture farmers market and local foods distribution center and learned about the local foods system and farmers market programs in North Carolina to support his work with local farm operations in Oklahoma County.

The Healthy Start Oklahoma City program strives to engage women who are at risk in prenatal health care early in their pregnancy and provide ongoing care, education and support throughout their pregnancy and postpartum period. In addition to providing Prenatal Health Care, the program also provides critical screenings, counseling and referrals for drug and alcohol dependency, domestic violence, and mental health issues that impact the health of both the mother and child.

Health Fair

Kaolin Porter, NEA presented to students about "Making Smart Drink Choices". Approximately 100 students rotated through the fair and gained knowledge of handwashing, dental hygiene, strong and healthy lungs, drug awareness and nutrition.

Youth are given the opportunity to learn essential nutrition concepts and engage in fun physical activities. Because youth involved in preparing meals are more likely to eat more nutrient-rich foods, KIK It UP! empowers participants by teaching hands-on, age-appropriate snack recipes they can make at home.

Grow a Row for the Hungry

The Oklahoma County Horticulture Educator, Julia Laughlin, and the Oklahoma County Master Gardeners are working on their second season of developing “Grow a Row for the Hungry” Community Garden at the Oklahoma City County Health Department NE Regional Health & Wellness Campus community garden. Approximately 8 volunteers are involved with this project and this year they are growing in three 14 x14 beds which will produce tomatoes, cabbage, sweet peppers, yellow squash, zucchini, cantaloups, winter squash and cucumbers. All of the food they grow will be donated to food pantries in the Northeast sector of Oklahoma City.

Oklahoma County 4-H Celebrates Mother's Day

4-H Youth from across the county gathered to celebrate all the moms, and mother figures in their life with a Mother's Day Tea celebration. Complete with tasty sandwiches, delectable desserts, and a plethora of refreshing beverages.

In addition to providing the excellent goodies, 4-H'ers danced, and sang to honor the special women in their lives. We want to give a huge thank you to the OHCE members who volunteered their time and tea sets, as well as our wonderful 4-H adult volunteers.
